

Awareness Of Being One

by Susan

As we all know, everything in this universe is vibratory in nature, and so it is that when two souls establish a vibratory resonance with each other, their unified frequency brings them into a deeply resonant field of oneness, their respective consciousness merging into a single 'oneness'—the awareness of being One. When that happens, each soul spontaneously senses the other soul's thoughts and feelings—what is generally called telepathy, a poorly understood phenomenon that involves much more than simply sharing one's thoughts with another being—and very powerful waves of tingling bliss engulf both soul beings into an ecstatic communion that brings pure joy and often draws tears of elation.

To establish soul resonance between two or a virtually limitless number of souls, all that is needed is a simple act of surrendering one's control over our sense of self-perception, an act born out of love for and utter faith in each other's divine beingness, something which the ancient concept of 'namaste' partly expresses.

For any soul who has not yet experienced this sort of deep surrendering to the One Omniversal Force Field of Love, the universal medium through which synchronous fusion is achieved—something which is somewhat reflected by the concept of entanglement as defined in quantum physics—it takes a definitively complete leap of faith to first achieve this state of being which, by their very nature, is an innate ability all souls can experience.

To experience soul resonance is to jump into a higher field of reality, also called higher dimension of existence, and to extricate oneself, albeit temporarily, from the realm of duality, and to enter the realm of 'onality', a basic, omnipresent state of non-duality in which all is sensed as One without any residual illusion of separation that is so persistent when one is attuned to the state of duality consciousness, which we are all so familiar with and usually so engrossed into.

When one is consciously cultivating this higher level of synchronous resonance with All That Is, then it naturally ensues that it will gradually become ever more easier to reach that state of pure bliss, this mystical state of samadhi, of orgasmic ecstasy, that has been described in various Eastern cultures. Moreover, as more and more souls develop this innate ability to resonate as One, it becomes ever more easier for other souls to tune into this morphogenetic field of consciousness and experience this same inner resonance—and thus through changing oneself, we are literally changing the world.

Soon a critical mass of soul resonance will be reached on Earth and this will allow the fast pace of changes on all levels of human reality that will enable the global shift into a higher dimension of existence so many have been expecting and sensing just ahead in the Continuum.

As we collectively reach this state of soul resonance, while in deep meditation, we will be experiencing a sense of Being Home—at long last! Being Home, back into intimate communion with the Source all souls originally came from, is possibly the greatest Mystery of all for any soul still self-separated from this Omniversal Reality, and yet it is the ultimate goal of our near eternal existence and the most efficient means of putting an end to all sufferings and to the karmic wheel that keeps us bound into material slavery.

Topics: love energy